Above—The Problem Room

Before

A great deal of worthwhile experience is to be found in the words "To change the complete appearance of your room, change your background first". The room pictured above needed an interesting wall paper and good color. The budget was modest and therefore an inexpensive historical wall paper was chosen. This scenic, "Minutemen", became the key to the decorating scheme, as illustrated in color at the right.

Minutemen—see page 23 for details

The Solution—with a scenic paper

After

The whole atmosphere of the room was changed by the scenic wall paper. Shades and drapes, slip covers and the corner bookcase added the right notes of color—and of course were selected to blend with the historical wall paper. The walls will wash beautifully for years to come, and provide a charming background in a gracious room.

Old South by Carl Fuchs

Old South is both one of the most extensive and most beautiful scenic wallpapers ever produced for the American market. Its twelve sections interpret the romantic era of old plantation homes and a gracious mode of life. It covers a wall space forty feet long before repeating any part of the scene, yet arranges easily on small walls in small homes.

The miniature illustration is inadequate to do justice to the original coloring. However, it suggests the softly blended hues that harmonize so readily with most fabrics, rugs and draperies. A stronger coloring is also available. Always see actual samples before final selection.

Many decorators say that the outstanding advantage of the lithographic method of scenic manufacture lies in the subtle and almost infinite blendings of color that are obtainable. For this reason lithographed scenics are so much easier to use . . . they naturally blend with surrounding hues. And they are oil colors—genuinely washable with soap and water.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

Scenic Wall Arrangements:

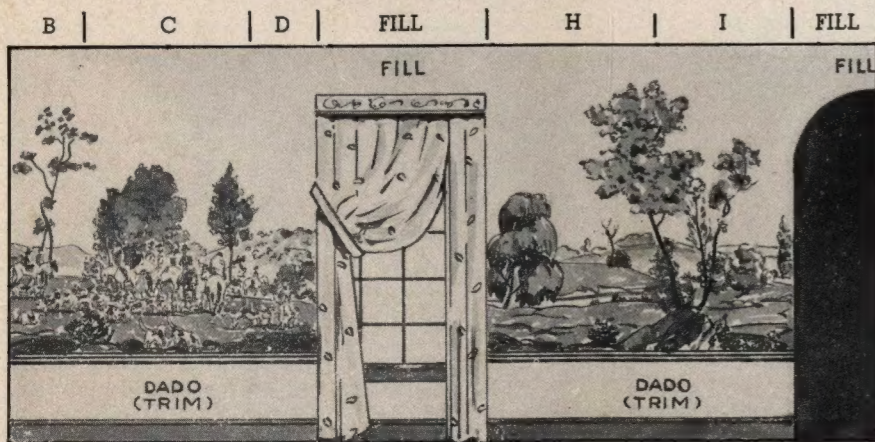

DADO:

It is usually desirable to use scenic designs above a dado, otherwise the perspective is too low in the room. In low-ceiling homes, as little as 15" to 20" above the floor is adequate. But the height of the dado is flexible and may be determined by the window sill level, or other architectural features.

HIGH WALLS:

The sketch at the left illustrates how high walls are treated. It is in scale with a 10½ foot ceiling. The baseboard is 6", Trim 24" scenic section 80" and Fill (or Trim) 16".

When adding to the height of the paper at the top, we advise using a divider of some sort to guard against the long seam showing an imperfect match. This is proper decoratively and architecturally, as well as being practical hanging for high wall areas. Our TRIM is suitable for this purpose, or a moulding may be used. Another treatment is to drop the ceiling color to this point.

The illustration above is typical of many wall spaces. "Fill" is used over doors and windows, and "Trim" is used as a dado.

NOTE: Each architectural element which interrupts the scenic (window, door, etc.) affords the opportunity of using any section desired on the other side instead of using the next matching section. (See above.)

1. PREPARE WALLS PROPERLY:

Prepare walls in approved manner. Make sure they are clean, smooth, and properly sized. Lining the wall is recommended, but not essential.

2. WARNING—Walls Must Be Clean:

These oil printed papers are more transparent than ordinary wall-paper. Hang only on clean surface as strong markings or designs may show through.

3. SOAK WELL TO SOFTEN:

This paper is considerably harder than ordinary hanging stock and must be soaked longer, otherwise wrinkles and blisters may remain after drying.

Wet strips with clear water using sponge or brush. Always keep two strips thoroughly dampened ahead of the strip being pasted. Paste with a medium paste.

4. TRIMMING AND HANGING:

Trim sides on corner marks, not at color edge. Should paste appear on face of paper at seams, remove promptly before it dries, using clean, damp sponge.

5. WASHING:

Walls should be washed every year, or more frequently if necessary. If quite dirty, clean with wallpaper cleaner first, then wash with soap and water as follows:

Use a soft sponge or soft cloth and rich, thick suds—apply freely. Wash from bottom up. Keep cloth and water clean—wash dirt off, do not smear in.

Wash convenient size area and dry with damp cloth leaving the connecting edges wet so as to avoid rubbing into unwashed area. Rinse wiping cloth frequently in clear water, wringing as dry as possible.

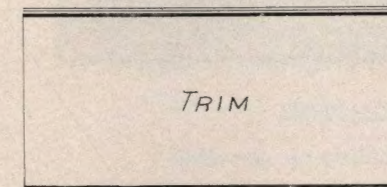

Fireplaces and other architectural features (as shown above) do not interfere with the charm and flow of fine scenic wallpapers. Frequently, large designs are used in rooms with low ceilings, giving the effect of framing the scenic.

TRIM AND FILL:

FILL is additional sections of the background color on which the scenic is made—might be called in the case of landscapes, "sky color". It is used to fill-in over doors and windows and, when necessary on high walls, to extend the height of the paper.

TRIM likewise is the same color as the background of the design, but with a harmonizing divider along each long edge of the section. (See illustration below.) It may be used as a Dado, as paneling, or to extend the height of the scenic paper.

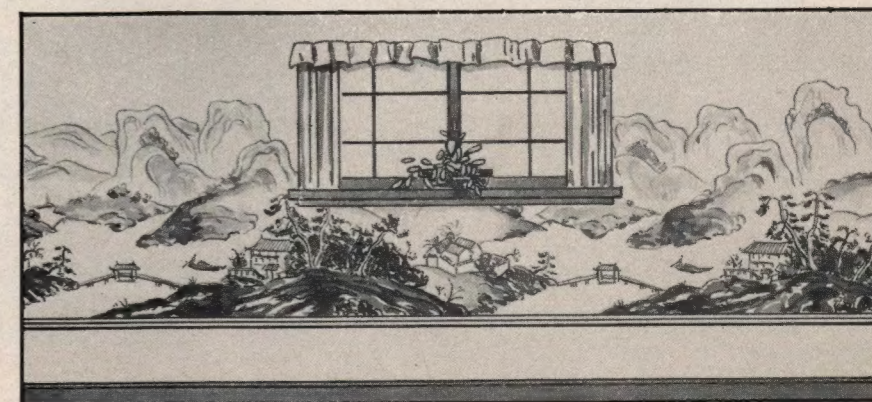

Size 40" x 80"

NOTE: FILL and TRIM are produced only for the larger scenic designs, not for the bath, powder-room or Frieze decorations.

IMPORTANT—ORDERS:

When ordering Scenics, lay out each room carefully and specify exact sections required including Fill and Trim. Usually we can furnish additional sections to complete a job if short, but a handling charge of 15% is placed on returns. NO CREDIT AFTER 30 DAYS.

Dining rooms sometimes have high windows on one wall to allow for the buffet. In this case scenic sections must be used below the windows (as illustrated above) and the top of the sections may be used above the windows.
